

Abstract

In order to reduce the possibility of a laser operating in multiple transverse modes at high power, the laser is provided with laterally asymmetric losses that discriminate against modes higher than the fundamental mode.

- 5 One approach to doing this is form an asymmetric ridge waveguide in the laser, that allows the light of the higher order modes to leak out of the waveguide.